

No-mow May ... June and July!

Extract from Spring/Summer edition of RSPB magazine:

...Many people take part in Plantlife's 'No-mow May', but don't take the title too literally - it'd be a problem for wildlife if every lawn was mown on 1 June! Leave areas uncut into late summer if you can. Do keep mowing paths through longer areas - Starlings, Blackbirds and other wildlife also need shorter turf. If the grass grows so lush that it flops, cut it. Otherwise, you can leave it as late as September. Ideally, cut it over several days with shears.
